

IN THE COURTS AND CAPITALS OF EUROPE

The French Assembly's War on Titles—Italy and Austro-Hungary Investigating Their Doubtful Nobiliary Patents—Few Titles Granted in Russia and Fewer to Be Given Hereafter in Great Britain.

Republics and monarchs are combining to restrict the use of titles of nobility in the Old World. The Poincaré bill, submitted to the French chamber of deputies, for the abolition of titles, and almost certain to receive speedy legislative enactment, is in keeping with the action of the Italian crown in instituting in one province after another a searching investigation into the patents of those using titles, giving official sanction in cases where the family papers are above question, and issuing prohibitions from the further employment of nobiliary distinctions in all instances where they are borne without proper warrant.

In several other kingdoms, notably in Greece, Roumania, Serbia, and Bulgaria, nobiliary titles have been abolished by law, and their use prohibited, and whenever one finds a Greek, a Roumanian, or a Serbian prefixing a handle to his name, it must at once be assumed that either it is altogether bogus, and assumed without any warrant, or else that it has been conferred by some foreign power, and that not having received the sanction of the bearer's government—being used, indeed, by him in defiance of his country's laws—it is to all intents and purposes worthless.

In Russia the titles actually granted by the Russian crown have been very few and far between. True, there are a large number of members of the aristocracy of that portion of Poland absorbed by Russia who have been allowed to retain the titles conferred upon them by the former kings of Poland. It is the same as regards the German-speaking provinces of Russia, the local aristocracy using titles that are of German or Lithuanian origin, and never conferred by the Russian crown. Then, too, there are several French and Italian families, now Russianized, such as that of the present Muscovite ambassador at Washington, which have been allowed to retain and to use in Russia the titles borne by their ancestors in the land of their origin.

But the titles actually conferred by the Russian crown itself are, as I have just stated, very few in number, among them being the coronets of count granted to the present minister of finance, De Witte, to the Mouraviev family, and to the late field marshal, Gourko; the title of Duchess de Beauharnais granted to the morganatic wife of the late Imperial Duke Eugene of Leuchtenberg, and the title of count granted to the two sons of the duke's elder brother, likewise the issue of a mesalliance.

The princely titles conferred by the Russian crown are equally limited in number, and comprise that of Youriëvski granted to the morganatic widow and children of Czar Alexander II, that of Gortchakof, conferred upon the old statesman who for so many years was chancellor of the Russian Empire, and that borne by the Orloffs.

The majority of Russian nobles who are known abroad as princes and princesses do not make use of that title in their own country. The title which they use is that of "Kniaz," and it would be infinitely better translated by the word "seigneur" in its English and heraldic sense than by the word "prince."

In England a reaction has likewise set in among the powers that be against the excessive increase of nobiliary titles. Nearly four hundred peerages were conferred during the reign of Queen Victoria. That is to say, the titles of two-thirds of the members of the present House of Lords are of Victorian origin. King Edward and his present advisers have come to the conclusion that it is politic to put an end to this prodigality in the grant of nobiliary distinctions and henceforth it will be found much more difficult to secure a handle to one's name in England than heretofore.

Emperor William since his accession to the throne, while he has conferred innumerable decorations, has granted relatively few titles of nobility, and causes a very strict watch to be kept by the authorities for infractions of the law prohibiting the use, under penalties of fine and imprisonment, not only of titles, but even of the nobiliary particle of "von" to the name, without proper warrant. In fact it is not so long ago that one of the leading architects of Berlin, Hacke by name, was arrested by the police on the demand of the imperial department of heraldry for violating this particular statute.

The grandfather of the architect had been a noble entitled to the prefix of "von," as was also the architect's grandmother, the daughter of an illustrious house. The old couple claimed to have been married at the time when Germany was being over-run by the armies of the first Napoleon, at a place called Paradis. Throughout their life the legality of their union was never doubted or questioned. But when they died and their children for the purpose of succession to the property were called upon by the authorities to produce the marriage lines of the old couple, these could not be found, and upon a search at Paradis the parish registers had disappeared. On the strength of this the court declared that the marriage was not proven, and the children were illegitimate. The latter, however, continued to style themselves "von" Hacke, without any interference on the part of the government, and so did, too, in turn, their children, comprising the architect in question, until the present Emperor started, through the imperial department of heraldry, a searching investigation into the validity of the titles borne by his subjects. It was then that the matter was brought to light, and the arrest and fine and imprisonment of the unfortunate architect followed.

In Austria the Emperor has just inaugurated a similar investigation in consequence of the somewhat alarming discovery that several of the officials of the imperial department of heraldry at Vienna have been concerned with clever professional genealogists in the sale of patents of nobility, and particularly in the revival of alleged lapsed titles. Their methods were to forge documents and entries in public books in order to prove the noble ancestry of people willing to pay, and in many cases the forgeries relate to periods anterior to the reign of Empress Marie Theresa. These frauds have been going on, it is feared, for nearly forty years, and the consequence is that a commission has been formed by the Emperor to investigate every lapsed title that has been revived, and every new patent of nobility that has been issued since his accession to the throne more than half a century ago. In fact, all nobiliary titles in Austro-Hungary are to be submitted to examination, exactly as in Italy.

With regard to the impending legislation in France abolishing titles of nobility, and prohibiting their use, it is likely to be carried without much difficulty, as the use of titles has developed into such a scandalous abuse that the members of the old aristocracy prefer to dispense with their titular dignities, at any rate when among people of their own set. There are laws in France against the use of a wrong name. But there is no law against the usurpation of titles, and as matters stand now, there is nothing to prevent any demi-mondaine from styling herself "duchess" or "princess" as long as she does not use the title to defraud tradespeople or to obtain money by swindling.

CANADIANS PLEDGED AGAINST AMERICA

Preference League Will Not Buy Here.

MONTREAL, Dec. 6.—The movement to get the preferential tariff for Canada from Great Britain has taken several new phases.

The idea of the promoters is evidently that if the United States discriminates in its tariffs against Canadian goods, the Canadians should take the same attitude toward imports from New England or any other part of the United States. Pledges are being circulated throughout the Dominion of Canada, that the signers will not buy American goods, as most of the imports into Canada come from New England, this plan is aimed most directly at that section in retaliation to what is taken here to be the New England attitude.

A Secret Alliance.

The pledges are circulated by a secret alliance, which calls itself "the Preference League." This league pledges its members to buy Canadian manufactures rather than goods imported from New England.

Prof. Goldwin Smith, who has always been a warm friend of New England, has made a public protest against this movement. He has obtained a copy of the secret circular of the league which appeals to Canadians to buy only Canadian goods because "by serving those around him every member of the league will also be serving himself by reason of the increased property which will result to those upon whom he is relying, directly or indirectly, for his own support."

A Solemn Pledge.

The solemn pledge taken by each member of the league is this:

"I hereby associate myself with the Canadian Preference League, and as a member thereof pledge myself to give preference when making purchases to the products of this country and to all articles of Canadian manufacture when the quality is equal and the cost is not in excess of that of similar foreign products or manufactured articles. I also undertake to give preference to Canadian labor and to this country's educational and financial institutions."

An avowed member of and spokesman for the powerful league said that the league's membership was increasing rapidly, and that within a few months the effects of the general adoption of its pledge would be seen in a rapid decrease of the sales of New England manufacture in Canada.

MISS ALICE ROOSEVELT IN NEW YORK FOR HOLIDAYS

Miss Alice Roosevelt left Washington yesterday for New York to attend the coming-out party of her cousin, Miss Christine Roosevelt, daughter of Mrs. Emile Roosevelt, which will take place next week. Miss Roosevelt will not return to the White House until after the holidays.

CAPTAIN BEACH CANNOT RECOVER

Friends Believe Clubman's Wound Self-Inflicted.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 6.—At the New Haven State Hospital this morning, it was said that hope had practically been given up for the recovery of ex-Capt. Francis G. Beach, the clubman, military leader, golf star, and former postmaster of this city, who shot himself at the Country Club two days ago.

Captain Beach has been growing steadily weaker. His mind has cleared up, but he is so feeble that the coroner has not attempted to take his ante-mortem statement. The suicide theory is firmly believed by his friends.

The early end of three of the most prominent New Haven young men who went to the Spanish war is notable. Captain Beach's brother, First Lieut. Rodney Y. Beach, died of typhoid fever while in the American army which took Porto Rico. He died in that place.

Allan Osborn, who was Captain Beach's first lieutenant in the Connecticut Artillery, at Camp Niantic, died of typhoid fever before the close of the war. Both were given the largest military funerals seen in this city up to that time.

Captain Beach is about forty-one years old. He has a son fifteen years old. His wife is a prominent New Haven society woman.

RAILWAY TERMINAL SITE IN ANNAPOLIS

Negotiations Under Way for Washington, Baltimore, and Annapolis Electric Road.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 6.—A. F. Hughes, representing the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis electric road, was here yesterday. While in the city it was said he entered into negotiations for the purchase of valuable property at the corner of North West Street, Church Circle, and West Street as a site for the electric railway station, waiting room, and office building.

This contemplated purchase includes the Arundel Building, the largest office building in the city; a large frame dwelling, belonging to Cyrus N. Joyce, of this city, and a small house adjoining the Arundel Building. The proposed site is at the exact terminus of the electric railway's franchise in this city, and would be the very best and most central place for it.

Since it became practically assured that the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Electric Railway will purchase the site, it is said that the Short Line will buy a portion of the Magruder estate, upon which to build new car barns and shops and a freight depot, as all of this is a part of and on the property of the Annapolis, Washington and Baltimore road.

COUSIN OF PRESIDENT IN TOILS OF POLICE

Yale Students Discipline Italian Swordsman.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—A tenderloin police station was besieged from midnight till dawn today by a crowd of Yale students who offered all kinds of money as bonds to Sergeant Sweeney if he would release two of their number. Those in quod engaged in a fight with Carlos Levi, an Italian fencing master, and were arrested by Policemen Frost.

As real estate was required Sergeant Sweeney was compelled to refuse. Frantic efforts were also made to obtain the services of a magistrate, but the dispensers of justice preferred the warmth of a comfortable bed to an excursion into the night to satisfy the demands of the students. The prisoners therefore languished through the night in their cells.

The students arrested gave their names as Frederick Roosevelt Scovel, 361 West End Avenue, a cousin of President Roosevelt, and Charles Powers of New Haven.

They had dined well at the football celebration at the Yale Club, and arm in arm were proceeding down Broadway. At Thirty-fourth Street they saw a man of low stature, high silk hat, who afterward gave his name as Carlos Levi, a fencing master. One of the students had a wet towel, and he threw it at Levi's hat. The shot was a fair one and the towel sailed through the air. The little fencing master swore and leaped for the Yale men.

"Oh, that'll be all for you," said one of the students, as he sat down on the Italian's face. While the three were rolling around the street, Policemen Frost gathered them in, and took them to the stationhouse, entering a complaint of disorderly conduct. Despite Scovel's protests that he was the cousin of the President, he was locked up.

FIRST FILIPINO TO MATRICULATE AT YALE

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 6.—The first Filipino to enter on a course of study at Yale arrived in New Haven yesterday to begin his studies. He is Salvador Saragosa, a brother-in-law of Senator Arroyo, solicitor general of the Philippine Islands.

ATTACKED BY NEGROES.

H. A. Schulz, driver for the George V. Knox Express Company, reported Friday night that he was assaulted near the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, over the Anacostia Branch. He had several bad cuts about the head and on the face. He said three negroes assaulted him and took all the money found in his pockets. Most of the money collected in the course of the day was in a shot bag, and was not taken. The Fifth precinct police and two detectives are investigating the case.
